

2 Great Trumpeters

The late jazz trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie is remembered not only for his talent but also for how his cheeks puffed out like a frog's as he blew his horn.

Writer Jim Doherty says that one day Gillespie was talking with Chicago Symphony trumpeter Adolph (Bud) Herseth. Herseth is known for turning beet red when he plays.

Gillespie kidded with Herseth, "Bud, how come your cheeks don't puff out when you play?"

Herseth replied, "Diz, how come your face doesn't get red when you play?"

Two great trumpeters. Two different styles.

God has made us all unique, and creation shouts the message that He enjoys that diversity.

Consider, as examples, the associates of Life Care, American Lifestyles and Life Care at Home. Each of us is different in the abilities and personalities with which we are endowed. Yet, when we come together in one company and pool those gifts, we are able to deliver remarkable service to the residents entrusted to us.

As we share with them our individual uniqueness, we are able to enrich their lives physically, mentally, emotionally and spiritually.

--Beecher Hunter