

An Honor for Betsy

Administrative Professionals Week is under way through Saturday – a time when the nation and the world show gratitude for the people who get the job done in their offices. And Life Care Centers of America is a company blessed with outstanding secretaries.

Honoree Betsy Bealer (center) celebrates with President Beecher Hunter and supervisor Dana Lesley.

As part of the celebration at the corporate offices in Cleveland, a breakfast was held Thursday morning and entertainment provided by Aaron Wilburn, award-winning humorist and songwriter from Nashville, Tenn. Highlight of the morning was the crowning of Betsy Bealer as Secretary of the Day.

Bealer, executive secretary in the Legal department, received a dozen roses, a tiara and a weekend stay at the Bearskin Lodge in Gatlinburg during the ceremony.

Bealer's "care and concern for others is demonstrated through her servant spirit," wrote Dana Lesley, her supervisor. "She is always mindful that she represents the face of Life Care, both in the office and out in the community. She has excellent verbal and written communication skills, is organized, detail-oriented, and maintains confidentiality in all matters within the departments she has served."

"God's given me a heart to serve people, and I just love doing that," said Bealer, who has been with Life Care since May 2007, working in Legal and the Compliance departments.

Life Care's exceptional secretaries are individuals who daily demonstrate their professional skills, their organizational ability, and their warm and engaging personalities. And they are also people who have dedicated themselves to the mission of serving those entrusted to us – whether they work in the corporate offices in Cleveland or in the divisional and regional offices, or nursing facilities.

We are grateful for their work and their loyalty.
