

Enjoy Your Work

The space shuttle Challenger, not being able to land in Florida, concluded its 2.5 million-mile trip at Edwards Air Force Base, California, on Friday, June 24, 1983, after accomplishing 56 of its 58 objectives.

The five-member crew was professional, and happy, as they were being interviewed.

Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, summarized her reactions succinctly: "It was fun and I'm sure it will be the most fun I'll ever have in my life."

Don't you admire people who are happy in their work? What about you? Are you...

- Excited about getting up each day to report to your job in Life Care, Century Park or Life Care at Home?
- Looking forward every morning to being around the associates with whom you share in the mission?
- Anxious to greet and interact the residents entrusted to your care?
- Feeling a sense of fulfillment as you deliver the service that impacts our customers?
- Experiencing a personal pride that comes from a meaningful and successful performance?

It is uplifting and inspiring to be around men and women who enjoy their work.

--Beecher Hunter