

In his book Written in Blood, Robert Coleman tells the story of a little boy whose sister needed a blood transfusion. The doctor explained that she had the same disease the boy had recovered from two years earlier.

Her only chance of recovery was a transfusion from someone who had previously conquered the disease. Since the two children had the same blood type, the boy was the ideal donor.

"Would you give your blood to Mary?" the doctor asked.

Johnny hesitated. His lower lip started to tremble. Then he smiled and said, "Sure, for my sister."

Soon the two children were wheeled into the hospital room – Mary, pale and thin; Johnny, robust and healthy.

Neither spoke, but when their eyes met, Johnny grinned. As the nurse inserted the needle into his arm, Johnny's smile faded.

He watched the blood flow through the tube. With the ordeal almost over, his voice, slightly shaky, broke the silence. "Doctor, when do I die?"

Only then did the doctor realize why Johnny hesitated, why his lip had trembled, when he had agreed to donate his blood. He thought giving his blood to his sister meant giving up his life. In one brief moment, he had displayed more courage than many of us can muster in a lifetime.

What about you today? Are you facing some critical event in your life that will require courage?

Or, more likely, is someone you serve in Life Care or Century Park confronted by enormous odds for which they need your courage, your love, your encouragement?

Johnny, fortunately, didn't have to die to save his sister. Each of us, however, has a condition more serious than Mary's; it's called sin.

And it required Jesus to give not just His blood, but his life – and to do it willingly – so that we might live for eternity. All that is required is that we confess our sins, repent of them, and ask Jesus to be the Lord of our lives.

What an amazing demonstration of love!

In Him (Jesus) we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace (Ephesians 1:7 NKJV).
