

Have a Clean Outlook

A man and his wife were on a long trip in their automobile, and pulled off the road into a full-service gas station.

After the station attendant had washed their car's windshield, the man in the vehicle shouted to the attendant, "It's still dirty! Wash it again." The attendant complied.

After he finished cleaning the windshield again and started to hand the man his receipt, the driver angrily shouted, "It's still dirty! Don't you know how to wash a windshield?"

Just then, the man's wife reached over, removed her husband's glasses from his face, and cleaned them with a tissue.

She then placed them back on her husband and, behold! – the windshield was clear.

A couple of conclusions from this story:

1. Sometimes, the solutions we seek are as plain as the nose on our face. Let's not be so farsighted.
2. It's mighty easy to blame the other fellow for problems of our own making.
