

Hot and Cold Springs

In some parts of Mexico, hot springs and cold springs are found side by side. Because of the convenience of this natural phenomenon, the women often bring their laundry and boil their clothes in the hot springs and then rinse them in the cold ones.

A tourist, who was watching this procedure, commented to his Mexican friend and guide: “I imagine that they think old Mother Nature is pretty generous to supply such ample, clean, hot and cold water here side by side for their free use.”

The guide replied: “No, señor, there is much grumbling because she supplies no soap.”

That seems to be human nature, doesn't it?

We are prone to complain about the weather – although we have homes with air conditioning in the summer and heating systems in the winter.

Americans have a love affair with automobiles and, for the most part, good roads on which to drive, but we gripe about gasoline prices.

Most of us go to nice restaurants with some regularity without the back-breaking task of harvesting the crops that make their way to our table.

We need to work on an attitude of gratitude.

Positive thinking is a winning trait that influences people.
