

Just Like Clockwork

A jeweler in a small town noticed that every morning a man would stop outside his shop and set his pocket watch by a clock that was on display in the window.

One day, the jeweler stood in the doorway of his shop when the man walked up, stopped at the window, and set his watch. He smiled at the jeweler and said, "I'm the timekeeper at the factory down the street. I'm responsible for blowing the noon whistle that tells everyone to break for lunch. Your clock helps me keep the right time."

The jeweler responded, "That's interesting. I've been setting my clock by your noon whistle for the past few years."

The moral? You never know how much your actions influence the behavior of the people around you. Even the simple, mundane tasks we perform in our daily lives can be of greater significance than we realize.

This principle is particularly true for leaders in Life Care, Century Park and Life Care at Home. Your associates choose to emulate your attitude, interpersonal style, work habits, attendance and punctuality. The list goes on and on.

Be assured: People are watching you.
