

Love So Amazing

I read recently of a blind girl who had a loving boyfriend – one who was always there for her.

The girl seemed to hate herself and everyone around her, just because she was blind. She blamed God for her condition.

Despite her attitude, the boyfriend had a genuine love for her that transcended her faults. Eventually, he asked her to marry him.

She refused, and explained it this way: “If I could only see the world, I would marry you.”

One day, the girl got the news that a donor was available to give her the eyes she needed. The operation was a success; she had her eyesight, and at last she could see all of nature about her.

After the surgery, the boyfriend came to visit her and to celebrate her newfound vision.

And he popped the inevitable question: “Will you marry me now?”

She looked at him with disdain, for she could now see that he was blind, too. Thus, she refused his proposal.

The boy walked away with sadness.

Later, he wrote her a short letter of a few words: “Just take care of my eyes, darling.”

What a remarkable example of unconditional love – affection without any limitations. It is the type of love that has no bounds and is unchanging. Unconditional love separates the individual from her or his behaviors. Thankfully, we see it demonstrated daily in our centers.

Such love is the kind manifested by Jesus Christ, who willingly went to the cross to bear our sins, to take the judgment that was due us, in order to stamp our sin debt paid in full through our faith in Him.

That truly is amazing grace!

Love bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things
