

Marquee Messages

Awhile back, I featured in this space "Sermons on the Signs," messages by various churches on their marquees. I promised then that we would follow that up, and asked for contributions from our associates.

Donna Rainville, recreation director at Evergreen House Health Center in East Providence, Rhode Island, wrote that the Perspective "brought back memories of days my husband and I lived in Winter Park, Florida, 30 years ago. On our trips to various beaches, we saw a billboard which I will never forget." It was this:

"What's missing? CH__ __CH. The answer: UR (you are)."

Brenda Quick, director of reimbursement for Life Care, saw this one on U.S. Highway 64 outside of Cleveland, Tennessee:

"Be fishers of men: U catch, God cleans."

Amy Cogsdill Hill, staff accountant for Life Care, wrote: "The best mini sermon on the marquee that I have seen was in Laurens, South Carolina, during the summer. The sign simply said: 'If you think this is hot...'"

Central Church of Christ in Cleveland, at the corner of a very busy intersection, poses this question on its marquee:

"How do you spell your best friend -- D O G or G O D?"

Al Estes, a former Life Care associate, saw this one on a Baptist church:

"God answers knee-mail."

And aren't we glad that He does?

These are fun, as well as inspirational. If you have a favorite one, send it in and we'll do this another time.
