

The Questions Google Gets

The Tampa Bay Times has reported a story that shows how criminals have taken advantage of technology.

According to the Pinellas County Sheriff's Office, William Joe Johnson, 26, stole an undisclosed amount of money from the Achieva Credit Union.

Johnson entered the bank just before 11 a.m., approached the teller, implied he had a gun and told the teller to give him cash, deputies related. He ran from the store with the cash.

After an investigation, deputies found him at a hotel. Detectives said Johnson told them he was in need of money and searched on Google "how to rob a bank."

It seems Google has an answer to every question we might think to pose. But that doesn't mean that the advice gleaned ought to be followed, or that the questions we raise should have been asked in the first place.

In life, we tend to find what we are looking for. The Bible offers answers to the best questions we might ask... Questions like: What is my purpose? What is God like? Can I be sure that I have eternal life?

To those asking the best questions, Jesus said, "Ask and it will be given you; seek and you will find; knock and the door will be opened to you" (Matthew 7:7 NIV).

The Bible doesn't answer every question we might ask, but it does answer every question we should be asking.
