

What About Your Freedom?

Election day in the United States this year is Tuesday, Nov. 3, and voting is one of the basic rights given to citizens to ensure our freedom. Let's examine what one of the fathers of our country had to say about independence and how it is intertwined with faith, despite what some would have you believe today.

John Witherspoon, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, had been a Presbyterian leader in Scotland when called to become president of the College of New Jersey (now Princeton). Despite his wife's terror at crossing the ocean, they accepted the call and arrived in America in 1768.

In May 1776, as the United Colonies readied for war, Witherspoon gave a famous sermon entitled The Dominion of Providence, saying, "This is the first time of my introducing any political subject into the pulpit." He insisted the cause of freedom was just and God-blessed, but most of his message begged his hearers to give their hearts to Christ.

While independence is important, he said, the eternal state of souls is even more so. "There can be no true religion till there be a discovery of your lost state by nature and practice, and an unfeigned acceptance of Christ Jesus, as He is offered in the Gospel. Unhappy are they who either despise His mercy or are ashamed of His cross. Believe it, there is no salvation in any other."

We thank God for our freedom today, and we are grateful to Him for the nation that Witherspoon and many others have given us.

But are you free indeed? Have you received eternal life in the Lord Jesus Christ?

If the Son makes you free, you shall be free indeed (John 8:36 NKJV).

– Beecher Hunter